Premier League football club Crystal Palace is seeking to raise £45m to fund the redevelopment of its stadium in south east London, according to a report from Bloomberg.

Crystal Palace stadium redevelopment is expected to cost between £75m and £100m

Crystal Palace is planning a new main stand at an expected cost of £75m to £100m, which will increase the ground's capacity from 26,000 to more than 34,000.

With features including more general admission seats, new corporate facilities, improved disabled access and a club museum, the redevelopment would replace the current stand, which was built in 1924.

Croydon councillors approved the club's updated planning application for a new stand at Selhurst Park in October 2022.

Croydon's planning committee first gave the application the green light five years ago, but it was delayed by the Covid-19 pandemic and the club submitted minor adjustments to the scheme to adhere to new London Plan requirements.

This required fresh approval before planning permission could be granted and any work could begin, together with the signing of Section 106 agreements and approval from the Mayor's Office.
